PAINTERS IN CONFERENCE, TO BACK NEW UNION BREACH

The conservation of the California watersheds and the development of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers as a method to solve the unemployed problem in this state was urged by Edward Hasey, a delegate from this city at the annual state conference of painters at Stockton today.

Hasey made a response to the welcome address of the mayor and president of the Chamber of Commerce of that city. A new moral code for labor interests was urged by Hasey in which he stated that labor was in a better position to secure evidence in the enforcement of the law than were the present ones setting the moral standards.

The matter of allowing representatives of the press to attend the meeting was carried by a unanimous vote. The question of local painters' unions withdrawing from the Building Trades Council was also carried. The conference went on record to give all the moral and financial support necessary to any union that was forced into court to protect its rights in the matter. This question of the painters' unions withdrawing from trades council is now before the courts and according to officers at the conference, the matter will be fought to a finish.

MANY CITIES ARE ACTIVE IN NEW MILK LAW

Many cities have secured the approval of their dairy inspection departments from the State dairy bureau. Some of these include Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Pasadena, Long Beach, Redlands, San Mateo, Palo Alto, Santa Monica, Eagle Rock, Beverly Hills, Burbank and Glendale. Other cities are filing applications for such approval, and the dairy bureau is making inspections as rapidly as possible.

Under the rules for the enforcement of the new milk law, every city, county, or city and county may secure the approval of the bureau if they meet the required standards. The bureau requires a sufficient force of inspectors in every city, and sufficient laboratory facilities to enforce the act, or at least an arrangement for the performance of bacteriological work, before approval is given.

NEPHEW KILLED IN A SMASHUP IN COLORADO

Roy J. Knapp, a nephew of Harry Somerville, sewing machine agent of this city, and Mrs. M. M. Carp, of the west side, was instantly killed on the streets of Denver, Colo., a few days ago by an auto driven by Mrs. Theodore E. Nelson, a prominent society woman of that city.

The Denver Post says of the accident: "Knapp was about to turn a street corner on his motorcycle when the high-powered touring car of Mrs. Nelson crashed into him. His death was instantaneous."

"Knapp resided with his wife and three children at 712 South Loga street. He was a commercial photographer. No arrests were made by the police until a verdict is made by a coroner's jury."

"Mrs. Nelson has been in the police court twice during the past month for speeding."

FAIR POSTPONED; TO START ON WEDNESDAY

Inclement weather was responsible for the opening night of the St. Paul's church fair at San Pablo being postponed from Saturday evening until Wednesday evening of this week.

The fair will hold forth on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Dancing, music and special games will conclude each night of the fair.

NATIVE SON BORN TO LOCAL WRITER

The latest native son to arrive in Richmond is James Allen Rogers, son of Roy A. Rogers, a local editorial writer on the Record-Herald staff. The little fellow arrived at the Rogers home at an early hour Sunday morning and tipped the beam at 7½ pounds in the all-together.

The mother and son are doing well and the latter seems to like his surroundings and will doubtless remain a resident of Richmond. Roy is treating his friends today to the choicest Havanas to be found in the market.

TAXPAYERS ASS'N SAID TO BE OFF ON WRONG FOOT

Petitions now in circulation by the Taxpayers Association of this city will be presented to the board of supervisors within ten days asking for an initiative election to dissolve the Richmond Water Commission.

Twenty-five per cent of the vote at the last general election, or 2000 signatures, are needed on the petitions.

It is the contention of the members of the water commission that the taxpayers' association is going about the matter in a wrong way and that anyway, it is too late to stop the bond election, for the reason that all arrangements have been made to place the Maria project before the voters for their approval or rejection.

The members of the water commission argue that when the project is properly explained to the voters and they are shown how a much better supply of water for all municipal purposes can be obtained at practically half what is costing them now and that the bond issue will never cost the people one cent of real money, they will be more than glad to vote the bonds asked for toward the consummation of the system which the commission proposes to install here with the money they will ask for.

It is claimed by the water commission members that the present agitation is being set going by agents of the Peoples water company and the bringing of the taxpayers' association to the forefront is but a ruse to throw dust in the eyes of the people here.

28 DAYS Until Christmas

The admonition to "shop early," thereby avoiding the crush of the last few days before Christmas in the shops, is a timely slogan of the merchants. Stocks of goods are going to run down earlier this year than ever before in the history of the country, because they are not so large, and it therefore behooves everybody to select their presents at the earliest possible moment.

And this applies more especially to those who are going to present their relatives and friends with photographs. Give the studios a little time, for if it should happen that a retouching is necessary it might delay the present until after the holidays. Shop early. It will be advantageous to yourself and the merchants.

HANFORD WOMAN REPRIMANDED IN POLICE COURT

Southern hospitality which was offered to Mrs. C. A. Harrison, colored, of Hanford, by friends in this city yesterday, caused her downfall.

The hospitality consisted for the most part of liquor and Mrs. Harrison when she started for the Southern Pacific depot found the streets far too narrow for her walking. She was reprimanded by Police Judge Hiram Jacobs today and sent on her way to Hanford.

ACCOUNTING FOR THE CHANGE

We are accustomed to hear of the superiority of the American artisan over his European competitors. It is claimed that our laboring men are so far ahead of those in Europe that the cost of production in our factories is actually cheaper than in European countries with their normally cheaply paid workmen. It seems never to have occurred to the men making this claim that a great majority of the "superior" Americans are persons of foreign birth, most of them in this country less than ten years.

The real reason for the superiority of the laborer in America over his European brother is because of the higher wages paid here, which permits better and more food, of better and more clothing, of better housing, of a feeling of democratic equality and opportunity for advancement of the laborer's children. The better food, better clothing and better housing and to the vital powers of the man, and the hope that democracy puts in his heart gives him the spirit of better work was possible for him, even in England. The foreigner changes for the better after he comes to this country.

Historians were once addicted to the theory of immutable racial characteristics. The English were such and such, the French were such and so, the Spaniard of his kind, and neither changed essentially through the centuries. Those were the days when heredity was considered the determining factor. Today environment has ousted heredity.

Some environments are pretty much perpetual. Climate is such an environment, and climate accounts very largely for the original molding of the races, yet even climate influence is subject to wide modification. As soon as men dwell in comfortable houses heated by coal, the effect of a harsh climate is considerable changed, particularly of the comfort indoors is supplemented by the protection which comes outdoors with seasonable clothes.

Food and drink constitute an even more important factor in the constitution of a people than we supposed even thirty years ago. Yet racial changes of diet are not infrequent in the history of a race. When some of us were boys men in the country districts lived largely on salt pork and corn bread. Today we eat tropical fruits and enjoy a variety drawn from all the globe, provided we have income enough to pay for it. These things allow a French, Italian or Polish laborer to do far more in a given number of hours than was possible for him when he subsisted on a little black bread and sour wine.

These are instances of physical environment occasioned by momentous changes in the physical environment occasioned by religion, education and government. When the Spaniard is relieved of the environment of a bull fight, the caste rule and given the advantages of a liberal education he becomes the equal of the Anglo-Saxon similarly situated. Property fed and clothed and educated, there is no better citizen in the world than the Italian. A change in his economic and educational environments would make a good citizen out of the Villa bandit.

The factors of permanency in character are not nearly as large as has been supposed; those of changeability may be charged with the larger influence. For example: The transformation of the national character of the German people within the compass of two generations' time has been so complete as to spell a contradiction. The German psychic state that produced a Goethe changed to produce Bismarck a century later. Prince von Buelow, when chancellor, once described the transformation as that from a Hamlet to a Graceland. Prince von Buelow has always prided himself on his knowledge of English literature.

Japan has changed radically within a half-century, upsetting crystallized conditions of more than twenty-five hundred years. England has changed, France has changed, and Russia is changing profoundly. The foreigner changes when he comes here and finds himself in a free, kinder, better fed and better clothed environment, and he becomes a better workman. That is all there is to it.

Not long ago the president made a speech and told the people among other things that the way to avert a scarcity of food was to be more economical and to raise more wheat and oats and corn and cattle and hogs. All very good advice, for we know that the American people are notoriously improvident, but that is not the solution of the problem, by a long sight. The solution of the problem is to conserve what we need for our own people and then if there is anything left, of course it would be placed on the market for sale at the highest market price. That is what any sensible man would do and that is what any sensible nation would do. It works the same way in either instance, for there is but a little difference between the individual and the collection of individuals, in matters of this kind.

Belligerent nations are accusing each other of illegitimate methods of making war. And supposing that all are guilty, what then? Certainly nothing in the nature of a surprise.

One of the most aggravating things in this world is to have your hair fall out of your head and sprout in your nose at the same time.

People who rush through life in their youth invariably pull back with all of their might at the end of the trial.

A fellow broke into print the other day with an article on, "What a Woman Thinks." They buried him.

Some women are so consistent they resolutely decline to ever say what they mean.

That's right, blame the other fellow. He's probably doing the same to you.

All things must come to an end sooner or later—even the family quarrel.

Of course you are a good prophet. We all are still after the result is known.

A kind heart saddles the load of many an empty pocketbook.

Some men are so dense they cannot realize their own density.

ALASKAN FURS WILL BE RAFFLED AT MOOSE BALL

ROYAL RAIMENT IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Following the note of frivolous gaiety which dominated fashionable attire during the summer, there is a wave of dignified richness of materials, colors and trimmings, that makes for the pleasure of matrons, who felt, and alas, often looked, out of place in short flaring skirts and rainbow sweaters.

VELVET AND FUR
Velvet and fur, lace and brocaded silks with patterns picked out in gleaming threads of gold or silver, and every last bit of real lace that a woman can wear, all go to make up the ensemble of royal toilets worn on state occasions. It sounds a bit discouraging for the girl with "nothing to wear," but really, if clever, she can achieve an excellent appearance in spite of her limited allowance. Many of the imported velvet gowns are velveteen—velveteen as the French call it—and one can have an all-fur coat, or just a little good fur trimming, or better yet, a smart little set that will go with anything and be quite in the mode.

TO TRAIN OR NOT
It one belongs in the matron class, trains which are in again add height and dignity to the figure, but the girlish set stick to their short petticoats, and show the "most fascinating cross gartering above their dainty slippers. This mode of fastening is decidedly faddish and usually as becoming as it is practical for holding the high heeled shoe firmly in place. Many of the trained dresses have filmy lace petticoats that reveal the footwear as enticingly as do the short skirts of dancing frocks.

FUR STYLES
Owing to war conditions abroad this country has become the fur centre of the world. All the finest pelts were brought here this year and to judge by the display made by our representative fur houses, not many of them got away again. Never before have so many expensive garments, and sets been sold so early in the season. Apparently every woman realized that unless she attended to her buying early she would have a much smaller selection. Gray furs and dark brown pets lead the mode, but really nothing in fur is undesirable this year. It is, however, always worth while to buy a reliable quality of fur and a skin that will give satisfactory wear, unless one has the means of discard and handsome scarf when it loses its tips, and before it looks cheap and woolly.

A good quality of natural gray squirrel is better than mole for the woman who must get the utmost wear from her coat or set. Dark natural mink is again modish, also Kollinsky, which is a Russian mink dyed. Beaver is still in the running and wears indefinitely, and coats that have an air of considerable elegance are made of very dark muskrat.

A BEAUTIFUL COAT
A coat that I saw at C. O. Shayne and company's was of Caracul trimmed with Hudson bay sable. This had a cape collar, and very stylish deep pointed cuffs, and was shirred at the waist line as definitely as if the pelt were soft satin. The black satin lining was printed with yellow tulips shading from pale tones to deep orange.

It is wonderful how soft and silky the finer skins have become with the skilled manipulation of the expert furrier. The new style book shows designs in fur that would have been impossible to make in the old days of stiff skirts and chimney linings. The finest of brocaded crepes in every fashionable tint are used for lining such garments, and the details of finish are exceptionally dainty and pretty.

NEW FANS
Feather fans are fashionable and have replaced bouquets for bridesmaids at some of the latest smart weddings. Both folding styles and those of Oriental design with pearl or ivory mountings are used.

EUROPEAN WAR BRINGS ABOUT CLEVER IDEAS IN STRONG PLAY

William A. Brady presents
ALICE BRADY
Miss Petticoats

The European war-cloud has turned the thoughts of many ingenious American minds to clever inventions. So it is along the lines of present day inventive activities that the Palace-Paramount photoplay "The Intrigue," coming to the Richmond theater, Wednesday and Thursday, tends. A young American has evolved a revolutionary invention: an x-ray gun that kills by wireless waves at 25 miles. In a novel range-finder on the gun the distant object is brought into a sharp focus. Then as the spectator watches, unseen electrical forces of great potentiality are converged on the focused object and in a flash it disappears into atomic dust. No object can stand against its tremendous destructive powers.

STURDY MAXWELL HELPS TO TIE NUPTIAL KNOT IN HURRY-UP CEREMONY AT TACOMA

As thrilling as a "Hazardous Holen" movie was the wild dash of two Tacoma girls a few days ago in a Maxwell touring car to get a best man for a wedding. It was the episode developed features which were little short of the spectacular. Had the incidents which go to make up this story been deliberately plotted by a professional scenario writer, here is about the way the cast of characters and a synopsis of the play would have lined up:

Bride Ranelle Corbett
Bridegroom John Wood
Bridesmaid Hazel Heasley
Best Man Raymond Corbett
Parson Rev. R. H. McGinnis
Maxwell 25 By Itself

Raymond Corbett is employed in a logging camp many miles east of Tacoma. His sister, Ranelle, is to be married to John Wood of Tacoma. At five o'clock, only a short time before the hour set for the wedding ceremony, it is discovered that the bride's brother has not been notified of the time at which he is to officiate as best man. Moments are precious. Bride insists her brother can be the only man attendant upon the bridegroom and that it is imperative he be at the wedding at any cost.

Suddenly Miss Heasley remembers her speedy Maxwell car and suggests a death-defying drive into the mountains, bridging time and space, to seize Corbett at work in the logging camp, bundle his best togs together and make a mad race to Tacoma in time for the fixed hour of the wedding.

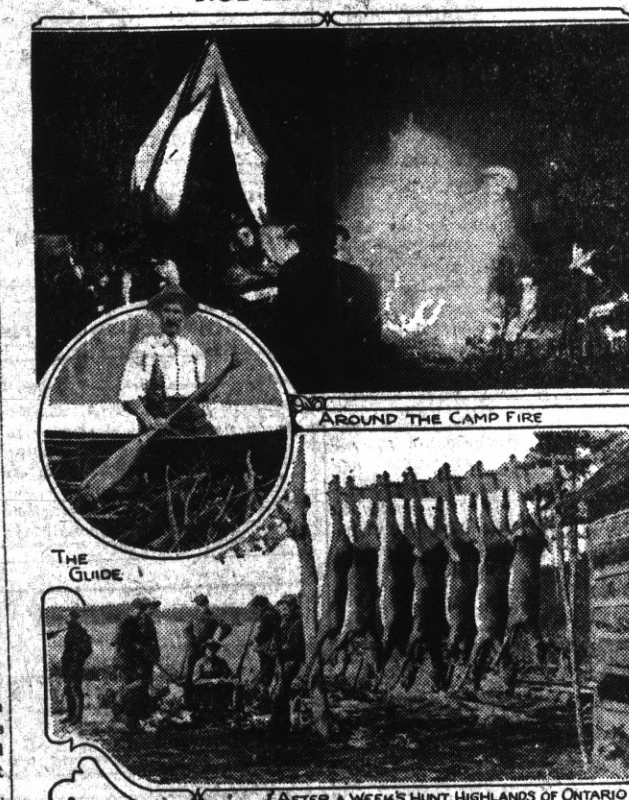

No sooner said than done. In a jiffy the young women, with Miss Heasley at the wheel of her Maxwell, are tearing over the city streets and the mountain roads to the logging camp, leaving in their wake a cannonade of telegraph poles and pine trees at a speed which makes the passing scenery resemble a picture fence.

Corbett is overtaken on the forest road in the act of snagging a huge pine log to the camp. He is rushed to the car, hurried to his boarding place, his togs thrown together in great haste and the thrilling race back to Tacoma is on.

Despite a multiplicity of dangers and thrills through which the trio is plunged they arrive in Tacoma just in time for the ceremony and to the decided relief of the waiting bridegroom, who had learned only a few moments before of the perilous mission into the mountains. It is just 8 o'clock. All answer the roll call in the rectory of the church of the Holy Communion where the Rev. R. H. McGinnis says the binding words that make Miss Corbett Mrs. Wood.

HIGH COST OF POWDER DOES NOT HALT BIG GAME SHOOTING

The "high cost of shooting" does not halt the sportman from the United States intent on red deer and moose. He has gone to the northern woods in the usual numbers although the war demands have put up ammunition some 50 per cent.

The shooting season opened November 1 to close November 15 for deer, but in the northern districts of Ontario the open season for moose is from November 1 to November 30. In the West, the season is from November 15 to December 14. Hunters who travel hundreds of miles with all the latest toys say they feel well repaid when they get even one moose, although there are some who get more.

Mrs. Charles Donnelly and Mrs. J. G. Gerlach are in charge of the committee from the Civic Center club which is making final preparations for the parcel post sale to be held by the ladies of the club on December 5.

FORESTERS IN SEMI- ANNUAL BALL SATURDAY

The semi-annual ball of the Independent Order of Foresters was held at East Shore park Saturday evening. Music for the evening was furnished by the Richmond orchestra.

The hall had been very prettily decorated for the dance, which was attended by a good crowd.

BAZAAR PLANS READY FOR TRINITY CHURCH

A varied selection of articles have been secured by the ladies of Trinity Guild for the annual bazaar which they will hold in A. O. U. W. hall on December 6. Proceeds from the sale will be turned over to the church fund.

Those who will have charge of the various booths at the sale are: Mrs. E. H. Harlow, aprons; Mrs. H. G. Biss, fancy work; Mrs. T. B. Shanks, candy; Mrs. C. Robertson, grab bags; Mrs. H. McCoy, floral; and Mrs. E. A. Preble, refreshments.

NOTES FROM THE PLAYHOUSES

OAKLAND ORPHEUM

"Cranberries," the delightful little playlet by Everett S. Ruskay which is at the Oakland Orpheum, carries a cast of three persons, and is as evenly balanced as could be wished.

Mr. Ruskay, who wrote the little play, will be remembered by his playlet, "The Meanest Man in the World," in which Alan Dinehart scored a big success over the Orpheum circuit last year. In "Cranberries," Mr. Ruskay has woven together a dainty piece of rustic life in which the modern problems of a hustling business life and an amiable mishap clash.

Frederick Karr, who plays the part of "John Godfrey, a financier," whose automobile comes to grief on a lonely New Jersey road, just when he is most anxious to get to town, studied acting and taught dramatic art before starting out upon a dramatic career. He has played with Mrs. Fluke, E. H. Sothorn and Otis Skinner, and has been in vaudeville, meeting always with success. He has never played over the Orpheum circuit before, and is sure of a welcome in "Cranberries." Mr. Karr has a host of friends in the west, especially in Chicago and Minneapolis.

Also well known in the west, but a newcomer to Orpheum patrons, is Neil Pratt, who plays "James L. Drake Jr.," the youth in the sketch. Mr. Pratt was for many seasons in stock, and played with Maude Fealy, Max Figman, Weber & Fields, and under the management of the latter, as well as under the management of the Shuberts. He was born in San Diego, Cal., but makes his home in Salt Lake City.

Dainty Miss Marion Day, the girl in the sketch, is a New York City girl, and comes of a theatrical family. Her father, George W. Day, and her uncle, Edmund Day, have been prominent in dramatic productions for a number of years, and Miss Day's father expressed not the slightest objections when Marion sought permission to go on the stage. In fact he approved and said it was his wish that she adopt the stage as a profession. And he helped her all he could, and saw to it that her dramatic education was complete. She has been before the public eight years, and will be remembered by many patrons of the Orpheum for her previous work before them.

The well-balanced cast has received great praise wherever they have played. Mr. Ruskay's little playlet bids fair to attract for several seasons. It seems to be the type of sketch the public wishes to see again.

An auto party consisting of Ross Jones, James Hodge, Robert Sylvester and H. C. Jacobson enjoyed a motor trip to San Jose and return yesterday.

HIGH STANDARD FOR NURSES IS PLAN OF BOARD

A sick person is entitled to the best possible care, and in order that nurses may be better equipped for their profession, the California state board of health now requires that all persons who desire to enter training schools for nursing, shall have first completed a high school education, this requirement to take effect September 1, 1918. Miss Anna C. Jamme, director of the board's bureau of registration of nurses, has given much attention to the necessity of raising the standard of nursing in California and she is convinced that if the sick are to be given the best of care, it is necessary that nurses be better prepared for the training school.
